North Bergen Bureau__ The MIT-sponsored Man/Robot Armwrestling finals pitted up and coming contender eL98 against the Indonesian national champion, Lee Fang.

Fang, undefeated in 74 bouts, had bragged about his record and trash-talked all week on every radio sportstalk show on the east coast. "That punk robot is a mama's sitions, creating the instrument and vocal sounds electronically, then digitally downloading them to a wireless amplification system. The lyrics are then lipsynced.

Their first song, "Doo Wop A Bling Bling" brought the crowd to its feet. The Fab Five then amped up the decibel level until seismometers as far away as Pottstown were registering

8.6 on the Richter scale. Several concertgoers were admitted to area hospitals for treatment of temporary deafness.

Joe Hornugg, local dockworker and father of one was among those treated at Mercy Hospital. When asked if he had enjoyed the concert, he simply stared and said "Huh?... What?".

The dim light in the alley behind building 79 at the Outland Institute shines onto the door to the Robogenetics Corporation's Research Labs. The locked door prevented entry from the alley, but more importantly, prevented the "experiments" inside from escaping into the outside world.

Last Tuesday, in a security breach, one of the lab's projects escaped into the alley and into the streets of North Bergen.

Citizens have reported seeing the man/robot hybrid shopping at Banana Republic,

"It was love at first sight"

North Bergen Bureau__

When the Reverend LeRoy Phillipson asked "OK11, will you now receive Lakeeshawanda as your wife? Will you pledge to her your love, faith and tenderness, cherishing her with a husband's loyalty and devotion?", the diminutive metal groom answered in his tinny monotone, "I do...do...do...do...do...do...".

Bride and Groom

His voice response mechanism had jammed, then looped, requiring a slap from the bride.
