SPECIAL ISSUE TWADDLING NOW LEGAL SUPREME COURT AGREES WITH TWADDLERS

The world was watching Thursday when the US Supreme Court unanimously ruled for the plaintiffs in the case of Pitcroft Twaddling Group v The City of North Bergen.

Company founder Harvey Pitcroft had maintained that US citizens had a Constitutional right to twaddle when and wherever they want, with no restrictions or limits.

In the defendant's corner, the City of North Bergen, supported by various law enforcement and anti-twaddling organizations, declared that twaddling was disruptive to the social order, therefore strict ordinances needed to be in place to control and punish anyone engaging in or fostering this kind of anti-American activity.

"If they want to twaddle, they can go to Sweden or Zimbabwe, but not in my backyard," said Herbie Manleyson, chief litigator for the city, in his closing arguments.

In retort, Pitcroft maintained that not one documented case existed of a single person who had ever exhibited any sort of injury, physical or mental, from any degree of twaddling. Twaddling is free expression and protected under the 1st Amendment, according to the plaintiff's petition.

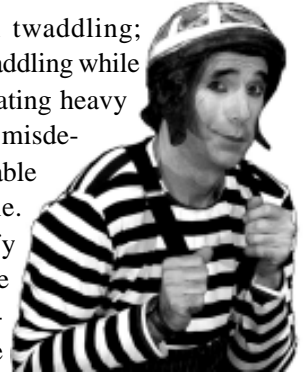

While the case was being heard, Senator Block Hardy introduced SB 11235, which is a legislative remedy that will protect the rights of twaddlers, but place some restrictions on twaddling; for instance, twaddling while driving or operating heavy machinery is a misdemeanor punishable by a heavy fine.

To demystify and explain the twaddling phenomenon, the following are some common sense do's and don'ts, but first, there are three basic things to remember about twaddling.

- 1) The fun factor is enhanced when more people are involved.
- 2) The cost in materials and time is very low.
- 3) When you've gotta twaddle, you've gotta twaddle.

Before initiating your first twaddling session, you really need to practice your basic twaddling position and purchase a pair of feather tipped twaddling gloves.

North Bergen Bureau__ The wildly successful Combover Cottage chain has opened its newest retail location at 1666 Quaintsville Boulevard, directly across the street from Mandrake, the award winning eatery recently relocated from East Hell.

"If there's one thing we do well, it's creating confidence for our clients." says Everett Moon, owner and stylist. Ira Stenler, Corporate Director of Marketing, oversees a rapidly growing business group. "We see custom combovers as the next big growth industry," he says.

will reveal a cross section of customers from across the county, both professionals and working men. The process is fairly straightforward. After the initial paperwork is completed and financing arranged, the psychological tests begin. Usually the first question asked is "Will a combover work for me?" Fortunately, a technician is on hand to snap hi res digital photos of the client and show him, through the magic of computer software, his "after" photo in a variety of custom combover styles.
